Will Tesla's Planned Electric Semi Truck Sport a 300-Mile Range?
fleetnewsdaily | August 28, 2017

As Tesla is poised to unveil an electric "semi" truck in September, a report from Reuters says the it will have a range of 200 to 300 miles. The company is also apparently working on developing an electric tractor trailer to accompany the vehicle. At a recent meeting with Tesla shareholders, Elon Musk said "We're [...]"

Improve customer service WITH GPS TRACKING

Discover how GPS tracking provides the tools and data you need to deliver faster, better service in Networkfleet's new Customer Service eBook.

download now

When considering the many advantages of wireless fleet management, don't overlook the opportunity to use the technology to ramp up one of the most important components of your business – customer service. GPS tracking provides the tools and data you need to deliver faster, better service, regardless of the product you sell or the work you do for customers or constituents.

Whether you're a small-to-medium size private company, large public enterprise, public utility or government agency, a telematics solution can help you:

- Improve on-time arrivals and response times
- Improve customer relations by verifying time spent on each job
- Protect your company's public image and brand by improving driver behavior on the road
- Build your reputation as a reliable service provider or vendor
- Create a competitive advantage through superior customer service
